CONCLUSION

This field trip study has given students an opportunity to learn beyond the walls of their classrooms and engage all their senses. For many students, these trips may be the start of new experiences and a newfound appreciation. Students realized that developing literacy and numeracy skills in adulthood gives individuals a better ability to reach their full potential. The visit was very useful for the students as they could now relate theoretical knowledge with the practical exposure which they have gained after visiting this trip. Overall, it was a good learning experience for the students.
